

An electro-futuristic song for E-Guardian Japan.

Description

We want to revisit some recent work from our Tracks & Fields Tokyo office: a spot produced by the production company TYO for E-Guardian, an internet security company that provides corporate cyber security. On the spot there is a manga-inspired hero whose main purpose is to protect businesses from viruses and cyberattacks.

We started to work based on a major reference for the research, which was the iconic never too old film The Matrix. After following some client feedback, we ended up licensing this electronic and futuristic song that you can listen it here!